LAND CO. MAY HAVE TROUBLE

Action May be Taken to Compel Promoters of Land Scheme to Show Up

MANY HERE INTERESTED

People Who Were Promised Lots With Subscription to Waukegan Paper are Becoming Uneasy

Becoming tired of waiting for some definite information regarding a transaction into which they entered something over a year ago when they signed up for a five years subscription to a local paper, and in so doing were to receive a lot at Long Lake, Sells county, Wisconsin, several residents of this city and Lake Forest have decided that unless there is some definite information as to the outcome of the project they will start action in the courts against the men who came to this country and put the deal through.

Two men, Ira S. Ferguson and Clarence H. Morgan, are declared to have been the instigators of the idea in this country and it is said they succeeded in getting many people throughout the country to take the paper for the term specified and as an inducement have handed to them a lot on this lake.

During the past week efforts have been made to find some trace of the men at the head of the deal but this, according to information received from Lake Forest has proven unsuccessful. At that time it was stated that the Aureol Fishing and Hunting Club of Chicago was in back of the plan to give these lots away. Milton Clow formerly in business in this city is said to have been the president of the club.

The lots were represented as being 25 by 100 feet. Among some of those in this city and Lake Forest who are beginning to make inquiry regarding the transactions of the club are: Tom Kelly, Al Selfert, Clarence Merritt and the following from Lake Forest, Highland Park and Libertyville: Ben Wauling who is said to have taken six lots under the agreement made, Harold Griffith, Wm. Hansen, John Buhel, Geo. Gebhart, Garret Bax and hundreds of others.

In speaking of the matter today Mr. Griffith of the Onwentsia club said: "I most certainly intend to take some action in the matter unless I can get satisfaction in the matter from some one. When these men came here they offered me my fare to Long Lake. If I would go there and look at the land, in return for this I was to boost the plan as much as I could here and this I did. For this reason I feel that many of my friends were drawn into the deal through my actions making me responsible in a way for the manner in which they have been treated."

It is stated that a few days ago some of those who were given warrants to deeds to the property at Long Lake sent to the recorder's office in Sells county and asked for some information. In return, they received a communication stating that such a plot of land had never been recorded there and that nothing whatsoever was known about it.

In view of the fact that so many people were drawn into the deal it is expected that in the near future there may be some decisive action taken to make these behind the plan show something besides the year's subscription to the paper. It is conceded by all that the managers of the local paper are in no way to blame for the dissatisfaction among those who signed for a subscription at that time as they merely made the arrangements with the fishing club as a matter of boosting their circulation, having nothing to do with the land whatsoever. —Waukegan Gazette.

Several from Antioch and the surrounding country are interested in this proposition, having bought from one to three lots each. As we understand the matter, each party received a contract entitling them to an annual subscription to the Waukegan Daily Sun and as a premium were to receive a lot at Long Lake, Wis. A certain sum ranging from $15.00 up was to be paid for each, payments to be either cash or in monthly installments. The contract also called for the delivery of a warranty deed to each purchaser. These they received, but when they were sent for recording, they were returned with the explanation that they could not be recorded ahead of the plot, which up to that time had not appeared. The purchasers are now getting uneasy and while they do not seem to blame the managers of the Sun, who are living up to their part of the contract and delivering their paper as per agreement, yet they wish to feel certain about the land which is coming to them. Steps toward an investigation have already been taken.

BRIDGE OVER PISTAKEE IS NOW ASSURED

In a communication from Congress man Charles M. Thompson received here Monday it is stated that the bill passed by both houses some time ago asking that permission be given Mr. Gardiner the right to build a bridge over Pistakee and Nippersink lakes and charge toll for the use of same, is now ready to be signed by the president and will probably be presented before him at once.

The successful passing of this bill will mean much for the residents in the community where the bridge is to pass and at the time that Gardiner first took the matter up with the members of Lake County Board of Supervisors it was met with the approval of all. The letter as received from Mr. Thompson follows:

Antioch News,
Antioch, Illinois.
Gentlemen—

The bill I introduced sometime ago giving Mr. Gardiner the right to construct a bridge across the waters of Pistakee and Nippersink lakes near the town of Fox Lake and it was passed by the House some weeks ago, has now been passed by the Senate and the bill will be signed by the president soon. This clears the way for the issuance of the proper permit by the War Department engineer in Chicago and makes it possible to proceed with the building of this bridge at any time.

Yours very truly,
Charles M. Thompson.

The Power of The Ballot

The farmers can only improve their conditions by uniting at the ballot box. Unite with your fellow workers in the factories and vote for the following ticket:

Socialist Candidates, Lake County, Ill.
Congressman, 10th district—John M. Work, Chicago.

State Representative, 8th district—Wright G. Hammond, Belvidere.

County Judge—Frederick Mains, Highland Park.

County Sheriff—J. M. Hanson, North Chicago.

County Treasurer—Joe Carter, Waukegan.

County Clerk—G. Hassnauksi, North Chicago.

County Superintendent of Schools—John Nantz, Waukegan.

NOTHING TO CAUSE WORRY

Fact That Friends and Neighbors Will Criticize One Should Be Matter of Amusement

We do not wish to alarm you unduly, but do you know that you are being criticized? It may be that you do not care, either because you are so abandoned and so bent upon an evil course as to be lost to all sense of shame, or because you are so immaculately virtuous as to leave not a single vulnerable point of attack for the slanderous tongue. The fact remains that uncomplimentary things are being said about you; things that do not at all agree with your estimate of yourself. Not one of your friends but objects to something about you.

Maybe you do care. If so, we are sorry for you, because you cannot stop it. It would be a good thing for you to mend your ways, but don't expect to stop the talk in that way. Figure your life out the very best way you can and then expect your neighbors and friends to disapprove of all possible combinations and permutations. —Life.

News to Advance Price

On account of the advance in price of paper, ink, etc., and in fact, everything that goes to make up a newspaper, we will, on and after January first, 1915, be obliged to raise the price of The News to $1.50 per year, an advance of fifty cents per year over the old rate. At the same time that we advance the price, we will also double our efforts in getting out a first class, newsy paper, and will, we feel sure succeed in giving the money's worth of reading matter, as well as satisfaction to each and every one of our subscribers.

Before the new rate becomes effective we make the following offer: To any new subscriber who enters their name on our list prior to January first next, we will for one year accept the present rate, $1.00. Or any of our old subscribers who pay up all arrears and one year in advance, before the first of January, 1915, will also come under the old rate. Any one paying after the first of the year will be charged the new rate of $1.50.

CATTLE DISEASE SPREADING

More Herds in Michigan and Indiana Found Infected With Disease

MANY ANIMALS DESTROYED

Federal Inspectors and Farmers Adopt Drastic Precautions to Prevent Spread of Mouth and Hoof Disease

The cattle plague in southern Michigan and northern Indiana is on the increase, according to reports made to Secretary of Agriculture David Houston, who was in Chicago Monday. Dr. John Mohler, first assistant chief of the bureau of animal industry, told Secretary Houston that nineteen additional herds of stock had been placed under quarantine during the last twenty-four hours. This makes a total of 168 herds now under guard by fifty-one inspectors from the bureau of animal industry.

Secretary Houston expressed the belief the "hoof and mouth" disease in the Indiana and Michigan districts, however, would soon be under control.

"We are doing everything possible to stamp out this cattle plague," said the secretary. "Under the direction of my assistants the infected cattle are being killed and buried as rapidly as possible. Our men are meeting with little difficulty in arranging satisfactory appraisals for the condemned cattle. The owners of the infected stock do not sustain a total loss. The department of agriculture pays half of the appraised value of the animals, while the state governments are paying the other half."

"We are following the only known means of stamping out this plague."

The slaughter of cattle for the South Bend market has been checked by the state authorities working in St. Joseph county in an effort to stamp out the foot and mouth disease which is spreading across the northern section of the state. An order was issued by Dr. Nelson, state veterinarian, to the effect that no farmer will be allowed to furnish South Bend with fresh meat.

Monday night the situation with respect to the spread of the foot and mouth disease among the cattle in La Porte and St. Joseph counties was described by Dr. Atherton, government official in charge of the work in Indiana as "encouraging."

Two additional herds were placed under quarantine Monday. These were in St. Joseph county. To date twenty-four herds have been killed by the government and state officials, the appraisal of these cattle, hogs and sheep amounting to $21,457, according to the report of Dr. Nelson, state veterinarian to Gov. Ralston.

Gov. Dunne following a conference Monday with the state board of live stock commissioners, issued a quarantine against counties in Indiana and Michigan in which foot and mouth disease exists among cattle.

Gas Refrigeration

At a recent meeting of the Natural Gas association it was announced that complete gas refrigeration outfits would soon replace the ice chest. In the near future, it was predicted by the committee, the new machines will become one of the most economical appliances that can be installed. The method of operation is simple. When it is necessary to keep the cooler or refrigerator cold, as the gas jets in the heater are lighted these jets impinge upon a tank in which is placed ammonia in a liquid form. This ammonia boils and vaporizes, the vapor being conducted through the refrigerator by means of coils, forming the cooling agent, upon the same principle that the great ice machines in breweries and other enterprises work. The ammonia is used over and over again indefinitely.

DEATH OF MRS. IDA TWEED OF INGDESIDE

Ida Mae Morse was born in the town of Grant, on Feb. 25, 1858 and died at Ingdeside, Oct. 21, 1914, at the age of 56 years, 8 months and 26 days. The deceased has resided in this community all her life. She was married to Alexander Tweed-Nov. 21, 1877 at Algonquin, Ill. Early in life she joined the Christian church at Fort Hill and has been a true and devoted christian ever since.

For many years she has been in poor health being an invalid and unable to care for herself for the past eleven years. Although the greater portion of her time was spent confined to her chair within the boundaries of her own home, yet she bore her lot with unusual fortitude and always appeared in a cheerful frame of mind, ready to converse with her friends about the doings in which she could have no part.

She is survived by her husband and four children, two sons, Levi and George and two daughters, Mrs. Fred Cribb and Mrs. Geo. Jackson all of whom were with her in her final illness. Besides her immediate family she leaves one sister Mrs. Park Smith of Gurnee and six grand children to mourn her loss.

The deceased was a member of the Sorosis chapter no. 329 O. E. S., of Grayslake and Cedar Lake camp no. 460 R. N. A. of Lake Villa both of which joined in the funeral services which were held at the Fox Lake church Saturday morning at 10:30 o'clock with burial in the cemetery at Monaville.

Card of Thanks

We wish to thank the many friends and neighbors for their kindness to our loved one in her illness and death. We appreciate the many beautiful floral offerings and the kindness of the singers.

Alex Tweed and family.

Printed Stationery For Farmers

Every farmer who owns his farm ought to have printed stationery, with his name, the name of his postoffice properly given. The printed heading might also give the names of whatever crops he specializes in, or his specialties in stock. Neatly printed stationery gives you a personality and a standing with any person or firm whom you write and insures the proper reading of your name and address.

If you wish to write to your congressman or member of the legislature, or if you have a request to make of your county superintendent of schools, or if you wish information from any business house, in any case your letter will have increased weight and receive more and quicker attention if you use printed stationery.

Get the habit. Come into the News office and have us print you 500 sheets of good paper with envelopes to match. It will be one of the best investments you ever made.

Why The Youth's Companion Should be in Every Family

"If I could take only one paper," said the late Mr. Justice Brewer of the Supreme Court, "it would be The Youth's Companion—a little of everything in a nutshell, and unbiased." The Companion is a family paper in the complete sense. It provides reading that, without failing to interest the young, still interests the mature. It unites young and old through their common enjoyment of delightful fiction agreeable miscellany, and the clear exposition of public questions.

So carefully is it edited, so varied are its contents, that it would easily supply a family with entertaining fiction, up-to-date information and wholesome fun, if no other periodical entered the house.

If you are not familiar with The Companion as it is today, let us send you sample copies and the Forecast for 1915.

New subscribers who send $2.00 for the fifty-two issues of 1915 will receive free all the remaining issues of 1914, besides a copy of The Companion Home Calendar for 1915.

THE YOUTH'S COMPANION,
144 Berkeley street, Boston, Mass.

Hadn't Seen Them.

A correspondent from Cheshire, England, says: "I came upon a small boy not long ago who was moodily fishing with an improvised rod and hook in the muddy waters of the canal. I cannot but believe that he will make a great fisherman some day, for he seemed to have the dogged perseverance necessary for the craft. But he was clearly far from happy. He paid no attention to me at all but mournfully pursued the matter in hand. 'What are you doing?' I asked him at last, 'Fishing for snags.' 'I don't know,' he replied, drearily, 'I've never caught any yet.'"

MYSTERIOUS DEATH OF CATTLE

Harry Flood of Warrenton Finds Four Valuable Head Dead in Pasture

STOMACHS TO BE OPENED

He Thinks Animals Either Were Poisoned or Were Shot by Careless Hunters; Inclines to Latter Belief

Harry Flood, a well known farmer living at Warrenton, is making an investigation into the mysterious death of four head of valuable cattle. He valued them at $1,000. The cattle, three Jersey cows and a steer, were found dead in the pasture Tuesday afternoon by one of the Flood children. Mrs. Flood in discussing the matter said she was of the opinion an investigation would prove the cattle either had been shot by hunters or had been poisoned. The Waukegan police have been asked to make an investigation.

The three Jersey cows were valued at between $125 and $150 each. They were of an exceptionally fine strain and Mr. Flood had refused many offers to sell them.

The steer was a freak. It was born last summer minus a tail and with a large lump on his back. This lump caused it to look for all the world like a camel and many people had inquired whether or not it was the case. Officials of the Lincoln Park zoo in Chicago had seen the freak and had offered $500 for him, but Mr. Flood held him for a higher figure. However, he had about made up his mind to make a compromise with the zoo people and dispose of the animal.

The Floods have a large herd of valuable cows and their pasture is so large that they do not see all of their herd every day. As the little Flood girl was returning home through the pasture she saw the four head of cattle lying dead. She notified her parents and an investigation was started.

The first thought that entered Mr. Flood's mind was that some contagious disease, anthrax, had entered his herd. He at once called up Dr. Smith a veterinarian and laid the facts before him. From the description Dr. Smith was convinced the cows had not died of anthrax. Mr. Flood said the rest of the herd looked healthy.

Mrs. Flood said that the stomachs of the cattle are to be opened to find whether or not there is any trace of poison there. If there should be Dr. Smith of Waukegan will be called to complete the examination. Likewise the hides are to be removed from the cattle to determine whether or not they were shot.

Only last Sunday a cow was shot by careless hunters just west of Gurnee and only a few days ago a horse was shot at Wadsworth.

Dr. Smith when questioned said he had not seen the dead cows and therefore could make no positive statements. He said, however, that it was barely possible the cows had died of acute indigestion. He said there was little water in the pasture where they were kept and possibly they might have eaten the dry grass and then become ill of indigestion.

Turtle of Great Age

A huge turtle weighing 1,175 pounds was brought to San Diego, Cal., the other day by Capt. J. Zolozzi of the Italian fishing launch Belvedere. The turtle, said by waterfront men to be the largest specimen ever caught in Lower California waters, is nine feet in circumference, and seven feet from the tip of its nose to the end of its short tail. The front flippers are four feet in length and almost a foot wide, tapering gradually until at the end they are about five inches wide. The jaws are a solid mass of teeth, over 200 being located in the upper jaw. They range from one-half to a quarter of an inch in length. The shell is ribbed and in spots pliable, which leads many fishermen to believe the turtle is nearly two hundred years old.

STAR MEMBERS ORGANIZE CLUB

At a regular meeting of Antioch chapter O. E. S., last Thursday evening, the plan of forming a social club, to be known as the Star club, was discussed and as all present were in favor of the move it was decided to carry out the plan. According to the by-laws as adopted: Any Star member in good standing is eligible to the membership of the club. Twenty-five cents is required as an admission fee and thereafter ten cents a meeting whether present or not. This money will be used for purchasing flowers for the sick or for any act of kindness that the committee may deem wise, as well as for purchasing some of the articles that the Chapter needs and should have. Each member must entertain once a year, at a time and place optional with the hostess. Meetings to be held twice a month. Refreshments limited to three articles.

Mrs. W. H. Osmond volunteered to entertain at the first meeting to be held at her home Friday afternoon, Oct. 30, at 2:00 o'clock (date was erroneously given out as Halloween afternoon at the chapter meeting.) The committee in charge wish to put special emphasis on the fact that every Star member is invited to join and if for any reason whatever you have not been personally asked do not feel slighted but come to Mrs. Osmond's Friday afternoon and join in the good time. Or call on Miss Elizabeth Webb at Webb's Racket store and after explaining it fully she will enroll your name if you wish to join. Thirty one names are already on the list.

MAN GREATER THAN TOOLS

Persistence and Determination Are the Two Keys That Unlock Door of Success.

When Faraday, whom Sir Humphrey Davy called his own greatest discovery, had a chemistry buzz in his head, he did not wait for luck to bring him a fine laboratory, or a great store of chemicals, or a large fund for research. He went to work with a few old glass bottles, a tin basin and an earthen bowl, and as the artist said when asked what he mixed his paints with, Faraday mixed his chemicals "with brains, sir." One who had much to do with discovering a cheap process for separating aluminum from its dross worked to earn his own chemicals, used a few pails and other cheap utensils and experimented in his father's woodshed. In both cases, the man was more than the tools; he forged his own key to success out of any more with native talent than with perseverance and determination.

"Greatness is in the man or nowhere," says one. Many who are not succeeding imagine that if they only had tools or right help or great capital, they could do wonders. Truth is, that "power falls down" on the man who makes himself more than equipment, and insists on working out his own ideas whatever his situation.—Exchange.

False Silence

Remember there is a false silence which would be as shameful as any faleness of speech.—William R. Richards.

A Woman's Last Request

The will of a woman, who died in London recently, contains the request that her age should not be put upon her tombstone.

OUR CREED

Do not keep your sublime love and tenderness sealed up until your friends are dead. Fill their lives with sweetness; speak approving, cheering words while their ears can hear them, and while their hearts can be thrilled and be made happier by them. The kind things you mean to say when they are gone, say before they go. The flowers you mean to send for their collars, send to brighten and sweeten their homes before they leave them. If my friends have plaster boxes laid away full of fragrant perfumes of sympathy and affection which they intend to break over my dead body, I would rather they would bring them out in my wry and troubled hours and open them that I may be refreshed and cheered by them while I need them. I would rather have a plain coffin without flowers; a funeral without a eulogy, than life without sweetness of love and sympathy. Let us learn to anoint our friends before hand for burial. Post-mortem kindness does not cheer the burdened spirit; flowers on a coffin cast no fragrance backwards over the weary way.

ALLIES UNABLE TO HOLD GERMANS BACK

Invaders Make Gains in Their Advance Toward Objective, the Coast.

PRESENCE OF FRESH TROOPS COMPELS RETIREMENT OF FRENCH LINE.

War Offices of Berlin and Paris Give Out Contradictory Reports—British Warships Continue Bombardment of Ostend—Fighting in the Neighborhood of Lille in No Way Diminished—Russians Claim Victories.

London, Oct. 26.—The allies' line of defense in the battle of Flanders has been broken by the Germans advancing toward the coast, and a large force of the invaders has effected a crossing of the Yser canal between Nieuport and Dixmude, directly east of Dunkirk. The force is believed to be part of the 400,000 troops rushed to the front by the Germans from the garrisoned positions at the rear of the fighting line. They are reported to have arrived just in time to turn the retreat which the French war office claimed into a victory. Both the French and German official statements tell of the advance of the Germans across the Yser and describe the battle which preceded it as a furious one.

As to the fighting in the vicinity of Lille and Ypres, the war offices are not in corresponding accord, the Germans claiming to have advanced slowly after heavy fighting, while the French say the attacks south and west of Lille were repulsed.

Contradictory reports are also received of the fighting in the Argonne forest, where admittedly a great battle tween Dixmude and Nieuport, forcing the Belgians to retire.

Offsetting this advantage gained by the enemy in the battle, which admittedly is of the greatest importance of any thus far in the war, the French troops in the Woerre region gained a signal success by securing control of one of the enemy's lines of communication toward St. Mihiel.

About Lille the battle continued with undiminished fury. Fearful slaughter of the Germans in the Argonne region during last week was recorded in a letter from a French officer published at Paris. The letter reads:

"One infantry regiment and a battalion of chasseurs was strongly entrenched with the mission of holding an important strategic highway. At midday four German columns, numbering 15,000 men, stormed the trenches with the bayonet. Their total losses were placed at a minimum of 10,000."

Copenhagen, Oct. 25.—A German official statement, wired from Berlin, declares that the French have retreated at several points on the battle line.

Another Berlin dispatch says that after violent fighting the Germans have entirely occupied the northern canal system, reaching from Arieux, 66 miles south-southeast of Bann, for 49 kilometers in the direction of the River Oise. The canal is unused and is dry. The Germans have changed it into a fortified position, which is occupied by strong forces. The canal has been the object of the latest fighting, as it is a highly important position in this part of the battlefield.

The battle of Lille is considered in Berlin to be absolutely decisive as to the development of the definite result of the entire campaign on the western frontier.

Allies' Attack Fails.

Berlin, via The Hague, Oct. 24.—The allies' vigorous attack on the German lines before Lille has failed. The theres), incident to the allied armies' advance upon Lille, is unparalleled in the history of war. The carnage has been frightful and the troops of both are on the verge of demoralization because of physical exhaustion and the rigors of the campaign in inclement weather.

The net result of the day's fighting in this region has been gains at considerable cost for the allies at points to the east of Arras, while about La Bassée the French and British have been forced to retreat at some places in the face of the desperate assault directed by the Germans.

Germans Extend Their Base. The Germans, heavily re-enforced by fresh land troops and by a naval brigade of 10,000 men, have extended their base from Ostend to Marlaekerke and Middlekerke, halfway between Ostend and Nieuport, and from these positions are shelling the Belgian line, which extends from Nieuport south along the River Yser, a distance of 18 miles, with their left flank resting on the coast.

It is semi-officially reported in Petrograd that the number of German troops sent to the eastern and western theaters of the war since the middle of September is 1,000,000.

The Belgians are being aided by the French land forces, the British warships on the sea and the British monitors and small gunboats in the canals and rivers.

When not directing the fire of their huge 17-inch guns against the Belgian position, the Germans are replying to the cannonading of the British dreadnaughts, which added their strength to the British fleet.

Russ Announce Victory. Petrograd, Oct. 26.—Minister of War Sukhomlinov in a statement sums up the situation in the following language:

Between the East Prussian frontier and the River Niemen the Russian army has been successful in driving back the Germans into Prussia and in clearing the governments of Kovno,

VERDUN IS DOOMED

Berlin Claims That Fall of French Town Is Imminent.

NIEUPORT IS BEING SHELLED

Allied Armies Hold Invaders Back After Battle on Yser—Losses on Both Sides Are Enormous.

On the battlefront, via Paris, Oct. 25.—The Germans are bombarding Nieuport. After forcing a crossing of the Yser in great force between Dixmude and Nieuport, the main body pressing back the main Belgian line about six miles south of the latter city, the invaders' advance was halted when the bending allied line stiffened, held and met the attack with a furious counter-assault.

But the Germans were able to bring up their heavy siege guns, and about noon a violent fusillade was directed from the German batteries on the Belgian positions on the outskirts of Nieuport. Scores of shells burst over and in the seaport city, and the din, which rose even above the roar of the general battle being fought along the Yser, was frightful.

Frightful destruction of life was recorded in the history-making battle of Flanders.

While the Germans have driven forward at one point in Belgium, the allies have forced an advance at another, until the once jagged line now shows great bends and sharp angles. A decision in this conflict is as far distant as when the Germans occupied Ostend ten days ago.

For a time at least Dunkirk and Calais, the objectives of the Germans, appear to be safe.

Word from the front to Berlin by wireless says that Verdun is doomed and its fall is expected by the German besiegers. The announcement that capture of the fortress is imminent is believed here to mean that the great guns are now playing on the main defenses and that Verdun is to meet the fate of Liege, Namur, Maubeuge and Antwerp.

That the Germans are now preparing to give deadly battle to the British and French ships of Admiral Hood's flotilla, which have lent such valiant assistance to the allied land forces between Nieuport and Ostend, was indicated by the report that two of the 42-centimeter (17-inch) howitzers and ten 28-centimeter (10-inch) siege guns had arrived at Bruges and had been posted on previously prepared bases between Zeebrugge and Heyst, a seaside resort nine miles north of Bruges.

From here the long-range guns will be able to reach the British warships, which, according to report, are bombarding the German batteries located in the sand dunes near Ostend.

Bruges, Ghent and Roulers already are full of German-wounded and more trains and road vehicles, both horse and motor, are blocking the ways between these towns and the battle front with their cargoes of invalids.

The villages of Meersdale, Feela-pelle, Westroosebeke and Sluden have been laid waste by shells and fire. In this section, counterbalancing the advance of nine miles made by the Germans near the coast, the allies bent the German line back at Roulers and Menin by a sharp wedge movement, but the allies were unable to hold Roulers because of the fury of the German artillery fire and were forced out, the fourth evacuation of the city in the fighting of the past week.

The rush of these determined forces and the accuracy of the fire of the Belgian rapid-fire guns and the British and French ships has literally heaped the northwest of Flanders with dead.

Fresh Army Helps Belgians.

London, Oct. 25.—Re-enforcements of French infantry have come to the support of the Belgians as well as several batteries of heavy howitzers, says a dispatch from Belgium to the Telegraph. Until these guns came for use along the Yser the Belgian artillery had been outgunned by German guns. Now there is an artillery duel on more equal terms. The town of Dixmude was again set ablaze by the German guns.

Cheek March in Poland.

Petrograd, Oct. 25.—To the west of the Vistula and to the north of the Pellen river, the Germans have been forced back on Lowicz, Skiermiewice and Radom, which have been captured at the bayonet point by the Russians. The German and Austrian invasion of Poland has been definitely checked. It is officially announced here. The Germans are using the Austrians to cover their retreat. They have been driven back 50 miles from the Vistula. In Galicia the Austrians have failed in their attempt to turn the Russian left flank.

Prince Oskar Is Dying.

Copenhagen, Oct. 25.—It is learned in Berlin that the German medical authorities attending Prince Oskar, the son of Emperor William, regard his recovery as doubtful.

General Von Moltke Is Better.

Berlin, via The Hague, Oct. 25.—General von Falkenhayn has been acting as chief of the German general staff during the illness of General von Moltke, who has been suffering from a bilious complaint. His condition is not serious, and he has shown considerable improvement.

ANTWERP GETTING BACK TO NORMAL AFTER WEEKS OF TERROR AND PANIC

Antwerp.—Antwerp gradually is returning to normal conditions. About 150,000 of the city's 350,000 inhabitants, most of whom fled when the Germans occupied it, have returned to their homes.

Some bakeries, meat shops and grocery stores are opening in the poorer section of the city, and a few old women with dog carts are offering apples and vegetables in the once busy markets. The German flag flies from the tower of the cathedral of Notre Dame, but Belgian priests are reading mass as usual.

The streets virtually are deserted except for the gray German automobiles which dash along at mad speed carrying officers clad in smoke gray uniforms.

No War Tax Levied.

No tribute has been levied on the city as yet, except that the Germans have demanded supplies for their army. General von Huehne is governor general of the military government. Maj. Gen. von Bodenhausen, commander of the fortress of Antwerp, will be installed shortly as civil governor.

General von Huehne has given assurance that Belgians will not be forced to dig in trenches or do other work for the Germans if they return to the Belgian cities. Every consideration is being shown the Belgians by the invaders, but this kindness makes the Belgians suspicious, as they believe, they say, that a trap is being laid.

Thousands of Natives Return.

Over twelve thousand Belgians returned to Antwerp, and probably half that number from Holland. All of the Holland border towns are filled with frantic Belgians, who move about anxiously seeking relatives and are afraid to return to their native land. The country about Antwerp is desolate.

It is estimated that about three hundred buildings were destroyed in Antwerp by bombs, most of these structures being residences. The Hotel de l'Europe and the Taverne Royale on La Place Verto were among 25 large buildings destroyed by fire caused by bombs.

La Mer and other leading business streets are untouched, but all the large business houses are still closed, despite the efforts of the Germans to restore normal conditions.

Argentine Consul Killed. About sixty persons were killed during the bombardment of the city.

Theophile Lemaire, Argentine consul at Antwerp, was the most prominent victim. He was killed in the cellar of his home by a bomb which came through the roof and floors and struck him.

Consul Dielerich and the American vice-consul, Harry Sherman, both narrowly escaped death during the bombardment. They lived on the south side of the city, where the shelling occurred. The operators of a Zeppelin dirigible balloon dropped a bomb within 200 feet of Mr. Sherman's home, and the house adjoining Mr. Dielerich's residence was completely wrecked by a bomb.

FOES' HIDDEN IN TRENCHES FIGHT DAY AND NIGHT

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND.

(United Press Staff Correspondent.)

St. Mihiel, Franco.—Fighting day and night from deep trenches whose wonderfully effective entanglements of barbed wire, steel sharp-pointed rods and sharp-pointed stakes almost touch, the thousands of men comprising the German left and the French opposing wing seldom see each other.

Probably never before has there been staged a battle so theatrically set as is the present. The line of battle runs wave-shaped for miles through dense forests, over and around high hills and across deep valleys traversed with fast-running streams of water.

The French stubbornly contest every attempt of the Germans to advance. Lines of trenches are extended a foot at a time. The thousands on each side dig themselves in like field moles. They cover their every movement. Even the guns are hidden and their location cannot be ascertained by the opposing forces, as their smokeless powder leaves no trace.

Visible to Aviators.

And in the open country the trenches are so constructed as to be invisible to an aviator unless he flies very low. When he does fly low he seldom returns to report. But there are always volunteers on both sides to attempt it. They go out and most of them are killed. A few are captured alive and they are treated with the consideration their daring demands.

The Germans have occupied St. Mihiel and are holding it and the territory adjoining, although they are still subjected to a heavy artillery fire. The children, however, play about the streets and the inhabitants go about their duties in an unconcerned way. They express no curiosity. Familiarity with danger has in this case bred a feeling of utter contempt for it.

Now Seek Verdun Forts.

The reports that the Germans were making an assault in force on Toul and Nancy are erroneous. For the present their chief objective is the smaller line of forts along the Meuse line from Toul to Verdun. These are Troyen, Gencecourt, Les Paroches, Camp de Romains, Lionville, Gironville and Jury-sous-les-Cotes. The first to fall was St. Mihiel, and several of the others are reported in difficulties. In addition, the bombardment of Verdun continues, and some of the outer works have already been reduced.

Aviator Escapes Death.

While passing through Vorvigny I witnessed a daring piece of work by a French aviator. Under cover of a fog he had swooped down on the German trenches and had located a number of them before he was discovered. Although the German artillery fairly rained shrapnel around his flying plane he mounted almost straight up and finally escaped to his own lines.

I was able to spend on entire day in the German trenches which have been constructed to prevent the French armies with headquarters at Toul and Nancy attempting a flanking attack. In one of the trenches the soldiers had organized a singing society. The whole scene was wonderfully picturesque. A thick fog hid the French trenches 800 yards away. The ghost-like figures of the greenish-gray-clad figures in the trenches were strangely silhouetted in the mist. Occasionally the thunder of the guns would punctuate the choruses. The singing was remarkable, as many of the soldiers had trained voices. Some stood at attention. Others had their hands tightly clasped in the attitude of prayer. They sang, "It's the Day of the Lord" and "My Vaterland; Beloved Vaterland," chiefly.

FIELDS ARE CHOKED WITH BODIES OF SLAIN SOLDIERS

By LUCIEN ARTHUR JONES.

Dunkirk.—I am writing this dispatch to the sound of heavy rifle firing in the streets of this town. A German Taube just now was flying above us and receiving its customary salute of bullets. It finally disappeared in the direction of Ostend without doing or receiving any damage.

This is the second aerial call the Germans have paid Dunkirk today. About nine o'clock this morning a Taube hovered over the town for a considerable period. The aviator paid dearly for his temerity, for his machine was badly damaged by shot and he was forced to descend outside the town, only to find himself and the machine immediately captured.

The Taube has been led in triumph through the streets of the town.

Naval Guns Repulse Germans.

It now appears certain that the Germans have been shelled out of their positions at Ostend. Small parties, however, were reported to be in the town itself this morning.

The bombardment by the British and French naval guns of the German right wing resulted in clearing the coast from Nieuport to Ostend of the enemy for a distance of several miles.

In the interior the Germans are reported to be demoralized and the reply of their artillery for once is sadly ineffectual.

Splendid work has been done here by the British Red Cross detachment, which formerly was at Ghent in charge of Dr. Hector Munroe.

German Dead Cover Field.

A member of the staff has told me that the fields in the neighborhood of Furness and Dixmude were choked with German dead. So desperate has the fighting been that the Germans left in a hurry without a thought of burying their dead or assisting their wounded.

While he was in Dixmude a German shell struck the house in which were resting 27 Belgians and not one of them escaped death.

Wolf Packs Attack Soldiers.

Reme.—A dispatch from Cettinje says: "A close watch at night is necessary at the military camps, not only because of the fear of the enemy, but on account of the dread of wolves, which, when the first snow covered the mountain tops, began to descend and wander in rapacious bands attacking the living if they cannot find dead."

Read Only German Poets.

London.—The Berlin Vorwaerts announces that a boycott is to be placed on foreign poets. Among the first to be boycotted are D'Annunzio and Maeterlinck. It has been discovered that neither is a man of any particular genius.

While the Serbians may have captured Vlasenitz it is not likely to enter into general conversation.

SENEGALESE CAVALRYMEN TAKING REFRESHMENTS

has been raging during the past week. The French claim to have wiped out a regiment of German infantry, while the German war office says its troops advanced and captured several machine guns, besides shooting down two French aeroplanes.

Bombardment of Ostend by the British vessels, which are no longer required to aid the left flank of the Belgians line resting on the coast, was begun in earnest. Their target was the German batteries about Ostend, but one of six shells which fell short of the range struck the Hotel Majestic, where the German staff was dining, according to a dispatch to the Amsterdam Telegraph. Several other buildings were damaged.

Recapture of Ostend by the Allies is imminent, as the advance column of Belgians, relieved of the pressure against it by the change of the German front in the direction of Dixmude, is reported to have made remarkable progress. It is now ready to strike at the remaining German forces at Ostend in the rear while the British ships are bombarding from the sea.

Contrary to previous published reports, Roulers is declared still to be in the hands of the Germans.

Submarine attacks on the British and French ships operating between Nieuport and Ostend are incessant. The attack was foiled by the discovery of the German submarines' presence within striking distance of a British cruiser by a British aeroplane.

The Germans in a furious counter-attack directed against the positions of the Belgian troops along the Yser succeeded in crossing the river be-

French and British are being driven steadily to the westward.

The principal gains of the Germans during the day were made in the vicinity of La Bassée. The Germans made a sortie and fell on the allies' lines, which retired in some confusion.

The Germans' gain at La Bassée was greater than any other portion of the line, but the day saw large recessions to the territory occupied by the Teuton armies all along the battle front.

The German attack on Belfort, by which route it is hoped to hurl the Kaiser's armies again toward Paris, is proceeding. Two French forts to the south of the main fortress have capitulated to the Germans, the garrisons withdrawing to the greater stronghold. The development at Belfort coming close upon successful operations at Verdun and the holding of St. Mihiel against tremendous odds is believed here to presage the final breaking of the republic's line of defenses.

French gunners destroyed three German batteries in an artillery engagement of huge proportions north of the Aisne, according to a statement issued in Paris.

Ferocity Unparalleled.

The battle to the north, particularly between La Bassée and the sea, and to the east, between the Meuse and the region about St. Mihiel and about Verdun, are being waged with undiminished energy.

The ferocity of the encounters where the British and French have come in contact with the invaders around Arras, (La Bassée and Arment-

Suwalki, Lemsha and Plotsk of the enemy.

On the left bank of the Vistula, toward Warsaw and the fortress of Ivangorod, commencing October 13 a series of battles with the Austro-German armies was fought which resulted on October 15 in complete victory for the Russians.

Claim Right to Attack Canada.

Washington, Oct. 25.—Germany's right to land troops in Canada, if possible and thus obtain at least a temporary foothold on the American continent was upheld today by Count Johann H. Bernstorff, German ambassador here, who asserted this would not be a violation of the Monroe doctrine. The ambassador suggested that as Canada is sending soldiers to Europe to fight against Germany, the United States should not consider it in any sense as infringement on the Monroe doctrine if Germany should send an armed force on Canadian soil.

$1,750,000,000 Cost of War to Germany.

Rotterdam, Oct. 25.—The average cost of keeping a soldier in the field is seven marks ($1.67) a day, according to Professor Wolff, the famous German economist. So, he says, the cost of the army to Germany during the three months of war has been three and a half milliard of marks. To this must be added an equal sum for loss of trade income, making the cost of the war to Germany so far $350,000,000 ($1,750,000,000). Professor Wolff places the total cost of the war to Austria so far at $300,000,000 ($1,500,000,000).

A few days ago the young woman received a short note from her intended scribbled on a piece of paper to the effect that he was slightly wounded and on his way to the Kaiser's capital. A transport of wounded soldiers arrived, among them the young man. The girl was notified of his arrival and hurried to the hospital, where her admirer informed her that his "slight wound" consisted in the loss of an arm, but that he would recover.

The next morning she received a note from him telling her that she did not know the whole truth. He had not only lost one arm, but one leg also, and he could not expect her to marry such a fearfully crippled man; therefore he returned her engagement ring and begged her to forget him.

Within a few hours the girl appeared at the bedside of the wounded man with her father, two witnesses and a minister, who married them, the girl declaring she was satisfied with one-half of the man who had sacrificed the other half for his country.

FOOTBALL PLAYER WAR HERO

Georges Andrea sprinted Quarter Mile With German Flag, Leaving His Pursuers Behind.

Bordeaux.—French athletes have been distinguishing themselves on the fighting line. A few days ago a notice appeared in the Official Gazette which said that a corporal of the name of Georges Andrea, who was mentioned in dispatches, had been promoted to the grade of sergeant before members of his regiment, and had been recommended for a military medal.

It is learned that this refers to Georges Andrea, to whom the French premier recently alluded as an all-around athlete and the best rugby three-quarterback who was a contestant in the London Olympic games. Following is the story of how Andrea, who is with the French army in Lorraine, won his honors:

With six men he went into a village to find rooms for officers. In the market place was a large band of Germans, who immediately set upon the small French detachment. Andrea snatched a saber from the German nearest him and killed two men with it. By this time he saw that his companions were dead or captured. He

LONG SESSION ENDED

ADJOURNMENT FOLLOWS THE WEAKENING OF FILIBUSTER BY SOUTHERN MEMBERS.

HENRY MAKES PREDICTION

Representative Says Positively an Extra Session Will Be Called in November—Cotton Committee Named to Investigate Needs of Growers.

Washington, Oct. 27.—Congress adjourned on Saturday for the season by unanimous consent after having been in session since April 7, 1913. Unless reconvened in extraordinary session by President Wilson to take care of some emergency it will not reconvene until December 7.

Adjournment was accomplished through the passage of a concurrent resolution ending the session at four o'clock in the afternoon, but clocks were turned ahead, actual adjournment occurring at 3:22 and the senate at 3:27.

No legislation looking to the relief of the cotton growers was enacted by congress before the adjournment. The southern senators and members, holding congress in session by a filibuster to get this relief, abandoned hope of the legislation when it was certain that neither senate or house could muster a quorum. They abandoned dilatory tactics, but voted against the adjournment.

Representative Henry, leader of the cotton men in the house, announced that he had positive information that congress would be reconvened in extraordinary session about the middle of November by President Wilson. The cotton relief legislation would then be brought forward.

The house authorized a special committee to study the needs of the cotton situation and report to congress by December 16. Its members are Representatives Mann, Austin, and Langley, Republicans; Henry, Lever, Heflin and Bell, Democrats.

The breaking of the cotton filibuster and agreement to abandon the attempt to prevent the final adjournment was reached by the cotton representatives at a conference.

Representative Henry announced that he had consented to the adjournment with the understanding that so soon as congress shall assemble, whether for the regular session or in extraordinary session in November, the cotton relief legislation shall be brought up first of all as unfinished business with a vote pending on its passage. He said he believed the passage of the legislation would be necessary then as now.

U. S. IN NEW PROTEST

Will Ask Great Britain to Free Another Ship Held at Stornoway, Scotland.

Washington, Oct. 25.—The United States has decided to protest formally to Great Britain against the seizure of the Standard Oil ship, the Plutaria, demanding its release from British detention at Stornoway, a port in the Lewis Islands, Scotland.

The protest which is identical to that filed in the case of the Brindilla, held at Halifax, will go forward to Ambassador Page at London. The Plutaria, which, like the Brindilla, carried illuminating oil, was similarly bound from one neutral country to another—the United States to Denmark—and had changed its registry from German to American, although its ownership always was American.

Set Date for Hearing. Washington, Oct. 23.—The McKellar bill to provide for the regulation of cold storage of food products will be given a hearing before the house interstate commerce committee on December 10, according to Representative Cullip of Indiana, chairman of the subcommittee in charge of the measure.

Mr. Cullip said there was great demand for the proposed legislation, that the committee purposed to hear all witnesses who wish to testify, and expressed the belief that the bill would be enacted into law.

Twenty Hurt in Train Crash. Chicago, Oct. 22.—Twenty persons were injured, one seriously, and a trainload of suburbanites were panic-stricken at the Seventy-ninth street railroad crossing when a Chicago & Eastern Illinois train crashed into a Rock Island "dummy" running between Blue Island and Chicago.

One Burned, Fifty Injured. Montgomery, Ala., Oct. 26.—W. Denkanip, an upholsterer, was incinerated, several guests slightly injured, and 50 others, including members of a theatrical company, were driven to the streets in their night clothes when fire partially destroyed the Terminal hotel here.

Fund for Cotton Loans. New York, Oct. 27.—A tentative agreement was reached which the federal reserve board practically approved, by which a fund of $135,000,000 will be raised to take care of the surplus cotton crop.

TO PAY DEBTS IN CASH

U. S. MAY OPEN STOCK EXCHANGE JANUARY 1, 1916.

Conference Held in Washington Makes Progress Toward Readjusting Foreign Obligations.

Washington, Oct. 26.—Financial forces of the government, the wisdom of some of the most prominent men in the American banking world and the friendly counsel of representatives of Great Britain were turned toward a solution of the problem of a readjustment of the foreign exchange market to meet conditions which have arisen as a consequence of the European war.

For more than three hours the federal reserve board, Sir George Paish and Basil B. Blackett, representing the English treasury, and some of the best known bankers in New York discussed the situation in all its aspects.

According to those present there was not a note of pessimism heard to mar the harmony of the conference, and there was every reason to believe tonight that all the problems, which loomed so large on the financial horizon a few months ago will be solved without great difficulty.

Here are the salient points discussed in the conference and the results anticipated:

American bankers stand ready to pay their obligations to England in cash. The $100,000,000 gold pool already formed and $80,000,000 raised by a New York syndicate to meet New York City's obligations probably will suffice to satisfy England. Payment of this total may not be necessary.

The New York and London stock exchange will not be opened possibly before the beginning of 1915. A conference between committees of the two exchanges will consider reopening beforehand.

The federal reserve board will hasten consideration of the proposed cotton loan fund plan, designed in part to give bottom to the cotton market.

The cotton exchanges in New York, New Orleans and Liverpool will be opened as soon as possible.

Craft Loaded With Apples Sinks in Mississippi River Four Miles North of Alton.

Alton, Ill., Oct. 24.—The steamer Bello of Calhoun sank in the Mississippi river four miles north of here. The 30 passengers on board were landed safely on an island. The steamboat was on its way to St. Louis from Calhoun county, Ill., with a consignment of 4,700 barrels of apples. As the vessel neared Illinois Island water was discovered pouring into the hold. The pilot steered the vessel to the island, where the passengers got off. The steamer then listed and many barrels of apples rolled off the deck and floated down stream. Relief boats from Alton took the passengers off the island. It is thought that the heavy load caused the seams of the vessel to part.

NOT SUCH DEADLY ENEMIES

"Bloody Chasm" That Separated Nationalists and Ulsterites Might Have Been Bridged.

As all the world knows, international war has proved a great conciliator in Ireland. As a contributor to the Bytander says, you cannot give much attention to the dismemberment of the empire when you are not certain whether you will have an empire to dismember.

There is a geniality about the Nationalist volunteer that makes you know that he would rather fight some one else—Germany in this case—than Ulster. A few stories are current that help to show how very ripe Ireland was for conciliation. Not long ago a company of Nationalist volunteers, passing a company of Ulstermen, and being uncertain as to the customary etiquette between deadly enemies—saluted. In a northern district there was only one field suitable for drilling, and as the two opposition armies wanted it, the owner began bidding them against each other. Northern cannonness asserted itself. The commanding officer of one battalion approached the enemy, and they agreed to rent the field in common, and use it on alternate days!

A third anecdote relates that while some Ulster volunteers were drilling a Nationalist was seen sitting on a fence watching them. When he was questioned by an Ulsterman he explained that his own company had mislaid their rifles and could not drill; "but," he added, "we were waiting to see if we could get the loan of yours when you're done with them."

Not Due to Ignorance. Doctor Briggs received a note from a farmer living back quite a way in the country, requesting him to come as quickly as possible to see his child who was very sick with "a very bad cold."

The doctor examined the child and then turned to the mother.

"Don't you know," he asked, "that your little girl is coming down with the measles?"

"Yes, doctor," was the woman's reply. "I knew she was."

"Then why in the world," asked the doctor, "did you write me that she had a very bad cold?"

The woman hesitated, for a moment, then, looking at her husband, said, with sullen frankness:

"Neither him nor me know how to spell 'measles.'"—National Monthly.

Not Particular. A prisoner in one of the Irish police courts the other day was asked his occupation. He mentioned several callings that he followed from time to time.

"And among other things," inquired the prosecuting lawyer, "do you pick pockets?"

"No," he retorted; "I don't pick them; I just take them as they come."

An Emotionalist. "So you're hanging around broke again?" said the policeman.

"Yes," answered Bill the Burglar. "I haven't a cent. I broke into a house night before last and the poor mark of a taxpayer told me such a hard luck story that he had me sheddin' tears an' leadin' him my last cent."

Most remarkable Watch offer ever made in this city

Join our South Bend Watch Club and buy on easy terms at the lowest cash price.

You have always wanted to own a high grade watch—a watch you could absolutely depend upon for accuracy—a watch that would be the envy of your friends—Here is your opportunity. Plans have just been completed that permit us to sell high grade South Bend watches on easy payments at the cash rock bottom price.

"The South Bend" Watch

on $1.00 a week terms

We propose to sell these watches in clubs. By combining the purchases of several people we can sell a number of watches at no greater cost than the cost to sell one watch. That's why we call it our club plan. A watch will be delivered to each member upon his making the first payment.

The amount each member will pay in each week will be so small that it will never be noticed and at the end of a few weeks the watch is entirely paid for.

The South Bend Watch which we are offering on this club plan is a watch you will always be proud to own—

It is guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction by both ourselves and the makers.

You will surely like its trim shapely build.

Don't let this splendid chance slip by—this offer is made for a limited time only—come in this evening and let us give you more complete information on this money saving plan.

This offer is open to both ladies and gentlemen.

Philippine insect pests.

Insects in the Philippines show distinct appetites for insulating material, as is proved by the ravages of ants and cockroaches on insulated wire and similar substances. Nor are these the only pests which the electrical engineer in the Orient encounters. Horse lizards seeking dark, cool places in which to rest often crawl into electric light meters and lay their eggs on the magnetic-disk disks. The Philippine ants, too, like to build their nests in automatic signals. Annoyance from these native pests has, however, been prevented to a great extent by sealing up all openings with pitch.

The Tuberculin Test and Dairy Question

An Exclamation of the Existing Situation in This State

A bulletin has been issued by the Chicago Tuberculosis Institute, under date of October 15, headed, "The Cow Question," "Shall Illinois Stand Alone?" "The Tuberculin Test for Cattle Gives Children a Square Deal."

Then proceeds:

"The Chicago Tuberculosis Institute, supported by the unanimous opinion of all scientific bodies who have studied the question, and by the decisions of the four Supreme Courts, that the tuberculin test is a reliable, safe and reasonable safe-guard, stands squarely for the repeal of the Shurtleff law and for the enactment of a law restoring to municipalities the right of self-defense against milk from diseased cattle."

And it ends:

"The campaign is on, and the first move must be the repeal of House Bill No. 55 of the Forty-seventh General Assembly, 1911, commonly known as THE SHURTLEFF LAW, and thus restore to the people of this state the right to local government in the protection of their families against tuberculosis."

This campaign started on October 15, 1914, following Governor Dunne's proclamation quarantining the state of Illinois against the shipment of cattle, which went into effect on January 1, 1914, and the order of the United States government, through the Bureau of Animal Industry of the Agricultural Department, prohibiting the shipment of dairy cattle into five counties of Illinois—Cook, Lake, McHenry, Kane and DuPage—which became effective October 1, 1914, and grew out of the results of the investigating committee appointed by the Illinois legislature to investigate the subject of the tuberculin test, the methods of procuring pure milk, etc., and which made a report to the legislature at its session in January, 1911. That report found and recommended, with references to the Chicago ordinances, on page 71: "This committee would recommend that a law be passed by the state of Illinois preventing and prohibiting any municipality in the state of Illinois from establishing or demanding the tuberculin testing of cattle as a means of protecting the milk supply."

And in order to get such a recommendation through the legislature and to settle the whole situation, the committee further recommended, page 39 of its printed report: "And this committee would further recommend that all dairy and breeding cattle shipped into the state of Illinois from foreign states and countries outside of the state of Illinois be required to bear with them upon entrance into the state of Illinois certificates that they were free from all contagious and infectious diseases, including the disease of tuberculosis."

This report was signed by every member of the committee, as follows: Edward D. Shurtleff, chairman; J. W. Allison, M. D., C. S. Hearn, Alexander Lane, M. D., S. C. Pemberton, A. J. Olson, Frank W. Shepherd, Guy L. Bush, John C. McKenzie and Thos. Tippet.

In pursuance of this report two bills were introduced in the lower house at Springfield by Frank W. Shepherd, member of the committee, and house member from Elgin, Kane county, House Bill No. 55, as follows:

"That it shall be unlawful for any city, village, incorporated town, county or other corporate authority in the state of Illinois, by ordinance, rule or regulation other than may be established by the law of this state, to demand, fix, establish or require the tuberculin test to be applied to dairy animals as a means or measure of regulating and purifying milk, skimmed milk, cream and dairy products of said animals, in any manner whatever, and every such ordinance, rule, by-law or regulation heretofore or hereafter passed, demanded, fixed, established or required by any such city, village, incorporated town, county or other corporate authority other than the state of Illinois is hereby declared to be void and of no effect."

Further, House Bill No. 540, was introduced to carry out the other recommendation as to shipping dairy and breeding cattle into the state of Illinois, and it is required that they should come with a certificate of health from the state from which they were shipped, showing that the animals were free and clear of all other diseases, including tuberculosis, but did not require the tuberculin test.

Both bills were presented to the legislature by the investigating committee. Mr. Shurtleff drafted the bills, as chairman of the committee, in consultation with Mr. Shepherd and the other members of the committee; and they were both introduced in the lower house by Frank W. Shepherd. House Bill 55 and 540, both passed the lower house in 1911. House Bill 540 was wanted in Illinois all over the state, outside of the dairy district. House Bill 55 was a special bill and only wanted by the dairy district. House Bill 55 passed the house first, and only passed the house upon the pledged word of its friends that House Bill 540 would also later pass the house, or be presented for a roll call. It later was presented to the house and passed by 120 votes. House Bill 55 had only received 79 votes. These two bills went to the senate, where the same course was pursued, and House Bill 55 finally passed the senate upon the pledged word of its sponsors that House Bill 540 should also be presented to the senate and passed as a companion measure. Thus House Bill 55, which killed the Chicago ordinances, passed both houses of the legislature and became a law, upon the pledged word of the members from the dairy district that House Bill 540 should also be passed as a companion bill; but after the passage of House Bill 55 in the senate, the other bill (the price paid for it), House Bill 540, was killed in committee in the senate at a meeting called ten minutes before the regular advertised time, with only three members present, and never was permitted to come to the floor of the senate to have a vote. In other words, the people of Illinois were tricked and defeated in the passage of the measure for which there was a public demand all over the state, and the bill was passed that was only especially demanded in the dairy district.

Thus the fight has been kept up and maintained and the dairy district agitated, and it has brought down upon its own head two quarantines, one from Springfield and one from Washington, and now the movement is on in the state to repeal House Bill 55. House Bill 55 must not be repealed. That means the tuberculin testing of all the dairy herds in the district, which House Bill 55 protects and has protected.

Nothing will protect the dairy herds in Illinois from tuberculin testing by the city of Chicago except a legislative act, such as House Bill 55, because it has been held in the case of John Quincy Adams vs. The City of Milwaukee, 144 Wis. 371, affirmed by the Supreme Court of the United States, that an ordinance of a city, requiring the tuberculin test for dairy cattle as an index of pure milk, is a responsible ordinance. The same rule has been laid down in State vs. Nelson, 66 Minn. 166, and in New Orleans vs. Charolene, 121 La. 890.

The question is, whether House Bill 55 shall be repealed? I must not be repealed. It is not the time for the dairy district to fight the government quarantine, but it is the time for the dairy district to fulfill its pledges to the state of Illinois, and have a law in Illinois, the same as in Wisconsin, Iowa, Minnesota and thirty-five other states in the union, as to the shipment of dairy cattle in and out of the state. Whether it is a good law or a bad law as to shipments into the state makes no difference. It can be lived under, and must be in conformity with the other states of the union and with the United States government.

Seventeen Million Saved to the State

Deep Water-way $20,000,000 Bond Issue, Busted Bubble

The Supreme Court of the United States, in June of this year, finally decided the case of State of Illinois vs. the Economy Light and Power Company, and the water power rights in the Desplaines river at Dresden Heights, and held that the Desplaines river was not a navigable stream, and that the water power rights at Dresden Heights in the Desplaines river belonged to the Economy Light and Power Company.

The expenditure of $20,000,000 to dig a deep water-way down the Desplaines river, as proposed by Governor Deneen during the last four years of his administration, would have resulted in spending $20,000,000 to build up a great water power plant for the interest of private corporations.

E. D. Shurtleff, as a member of the house from this district, bitterly opposed this plan, and an attempt was made to drive him out of politics on account of his position on the deep water-way question.

Engineers have lately figured upon the entire proposition, and the Chicago Herald, under date of Friday, Oct. 16, 1914, among other things said:

Plan No. 3, submitted by a number of expert engineers, is the one the administration will advance in the legislature this coming winter. At an estimated cost of $3,075,000 it would supply the missing link between deep water at Joliet and seven foot deep in the Illinois river below LaSalle, and would furnish a lakes-to-gulf artery of a minimum seven-foot depth."

This means that the water of the sanitary district channel will be diverted from the Desplaines river to the old Illinois and Michigan canal, which the state of Illinois now owns; and at an expenditure of about $3,000,000 will dig a channel which will make a water-way for all practical purposes, connecting Chicago with the Illinois and Mississippi rivers, and will develop all of the water power possible to be developed by the water in the Chicago sanitary district channel.

Senseless Reforms.

Patrick and Joseph had just arrived in England, and were willing away the time by looking at all the sights of the seaport.

In the course of their travels they found themselves looking at the outside of the free library. It was a palatial building of carved stone.

After a short silence, something inscribed over the main entrance caused Patrick to ask a question:

"And, phwat, Joseph," he asked, "may be the meanin' of thim letters on the wall?"

"Which letters, is it?" asked Joseph. "Over the door, there. It says 'MDCCLXXVII,' and sorrow come to me if I can make out the meanin' of it at all!"

"Surely, me boy, it only means eighteen hundred and ninety-seven!"

"Is that all, sure? Falth, then, it's meself thinks all this simplified spelling business is tommy-rot!"

Not a Bird.

Titian Smythe stood anxiously by as the great art critic bent over his masterpiece. That learned man, having examined the picture from every part of the studio, at last spoke:

"Splendid, my dear sir! I congratulate you on having got so much realism into your work, especially in these days of Futurists and such-like fad diets. The realism and sense of depth that you have got into that impression of a coal mine is, I assure you, my dear sir, one of the best bits of work I have seen for many a day!"

During this speech Titian's face had gradually slipped downward.

"Coal mine!" he roared. "You fat-headed idiot, that's a bird's-eye view of Blackpool!"

"Is it, indeed?" answered the critic, picking up his hat and walking slowly to the door. "Then I am glad I don't live in Blackpool, and I am even happier to think, sir, that I am not a bird!"

SYNOPSIS.

Challa Wrاندall is found murdered in a rooming house near New York. Mrs. Wrاندall is summoned from the city and identifies the body. A young woman who accompanied Wrاندall to the inn and subsequently disappeared, is suspected. Mrs. Wrاندall starts back for New York in an auto during a blinding snow storm. On the way she meets a young woman in the road who proves to be the woman who killed Wrاندall. Feeling that the girl had done her a service in ridding her of the man who though she loved him deeply had caused her great sorrow, Mrs. Wrاندall determines to shield her and takes her to her own home. Mrs. Wrاندall tells the story of Hetty Castleton's life, except that portion that relates to Wrاندall. This and the story of the tragedy she forbids the girl ever to tell. She offers Hetty a home, friendship and security from peril on account of the tragedy. Sara Wrاندall and Hetty return to New York after an absence of a year in Europe. Leslie Wrاندall, brother of Challa, becomes greatly interested in Hetty. Sara sees in Leslie's infatuation possibly far revenge on the Wrاندalls and reparation for the wrongs she suffered at the hands of Challa Wrاندall by marrying his murderer into the family. Leslie, in company with his friend Brandon Booth, an artist, visits Sara at her country place. Leslie confesses to Sara that he is madly in love with Hetty. Sara arranges with Booth to paint a picture of Hetty. Booth has a haunting feeling that he has seen Hetty before. Looking through a portfolio of pictures by an unknown English artist he finds one of Hetty. He speaks to her about it. Hetty declares it must be a picture of Hetty Glynn, an English actress, who resembles her very much. Much to his chagrin Leslie is refused by Hetty. Booth and Hetty confess their love for each other, but the latter declares that she can never marry as there is an insurmountable barrier in the way. Hetty admits to Sara that she loves Booth. Sara declares that Hetty must marry Leslie, who must be made to pay his brother's debt in the girl. Hetty again attempts to tell the real story of the tragedy and Sara threatens to strangle her if she says a word.

CHAPTER XII.—Continued.

"Not now. Not since I have found you out. The thing I have feared all along has come to pass. I am relieved, now that you show me just where I truly stand. But, I asked: what of you?"

"The world is more likely to applaud than to curse me, Hetty. It likes a new sensation. My change of heart will appear quite natural."

"Are you sure that the world will applaud your real design? You hate the Wrاندalls. Will they be charitable toward you when the truth is given out? Will Leslie applaud you? Listen, please: I am trying to save you from yourself, Sara. You will fall in everything you have hoped for. You will be more accursed than I. The world will pity me. It may even forgive me. It will listen to my story, which is more than you will do, and it will believe me. Ah, I am not afraid now. At first I was in terror. I had no hope to escape. All that is past. Today I am ready to take my chances with the big, generous world. Men will try me, and men are not made of stone and steel. They punish but they do not avenge when they sit in jury boxes. They are not women! Good God, Sara, is there a man living today who could have planned this thing you have cherished all these months? Not one! And all men will curse you for it, even though they send me to prison or to the chair. But they will not condemn me. They will hear my story and they will set me free. And then, what of you?"

Sara stood perfectly rigid, regarding this earnest reasoner with growing wonder.

"My dear," she said, "you would better be thinking of yourself, not of me."

"Why, when I tell my story, the world will hate you, Sara Wrاندall. You have helped me, you have been good to me, no matter what sinister motive you may have had in doing so. It is my turn to help you."

"To help me!" cried Sara, astonished in spite of herself.

"Yes. To save you from execration—and even worse."

"There is no moral wrong in marriage with Leslie Wrاندall," said Sara, returning to her own project.

"No moral wrong!" cried Hetty, aghast. "No, I suppose not," she went on, a moment later. "It is something much deeper, much blacker than moral wrong. There is no word for it. And if I marry him, what then? Wherein lies your triumph? You can't mean that—God in heaven! You would not go to them with the truth when it was too late for him to—to cast me off!"

"I am no such fool as that. The secret would be forever safe in that event. My triumph, as you call it, we will not discuss."

"How you must hate me, to be willing to do such an infamous thing to me!"

"I do not hate you, Hetty."

"In heaven's name, what do you call it?"

"Justification. Listen to me now. I am saying this for your good sense to seize and appreciate. Would it be right in me to allow you to marry any other man, knowing all that I know? There is but one man you can in justice marry: the one who can repair the wrong that his own blood created. Not Brandon Booth, nor any man save Leslie Wrاندall. He is the man who must pay."

"I do not intend to marry," said Hetty.

"But Leslie will marry some one, and I intend that it shall be you. He shall marry the ex-chorus girl, the artist's model, the prostitute! Wait! Don't fly at me like that! Don't assume that look of virtuous horror! Let me say what I have to say. This much of your story shall they know, and no more. They will be proud of you!"

Hetty's eyes were blazing. "You use that name—you call me that—and yet you have kissed me, caressed me—loved me!" she cried hoarsely with passion.

"He will ask you tonight for the second time. You will accept him. That is all."

"You must take back what you have just said to me—of me—Sara Wrاندall. You must unsay it! You must beg my pardon for that!"

"I draw no line between mistress and prostitute."

"But I—"

"Enough!"

"You wrong me vilely! You must let me—"

"I have an excellent memory, and it serves me well."

Hetty suddenly threw herself upon the couch and buried her face in her arms. Great sobs shook her slender frame.

Sara stood over her and watched for a long time with pitiless eyes. Then a queer, uneasy, wondering light began to develop in those dark, ominous eyes. She leaned forward the better to listen to the choked, inarticulate words that were pouring from the girl's lips. At last, moved by some power she could not have accounted for, she knelt beside the quivering body, and laid her hand, almost timidly, upon the girl's shoulder.

"Hetty—Hetty, if I have wronged you in—thinking that of you—I—I—"

she began brokenly. Then she lifted her eyes, and the harsh light tried to steal back into them. "No, no! What am I saying? What a fool I am to give way—"

"You have wronged me—terribly, terribly!" came in smothered tones from the cushions. "I did not dream you thought that of me."

"What was I to think?"

Hetty lifted her head and cried out: "You would not let me speak! You refused to hear my story. You have been thinking this of me all along, holding it against me, damning me with it, and I have been closer to you than—My God, what manner of woman are you?"

Sara seized her hands and held them in a fierce, tense grip. Her eyes were glowing with a strange fire.

"Tell me—tell me now, on your soul, Hetty were you—were you—"

"No! No! On my soul, no!"

"Look into my eyes!"

The girl's eyes did not falter. She met the dark, penetrating gaze of the other and, though dimmed by tears, her blue eyes were steadfast and resolute. Sara seemed to be searching the very soul of her, the soul that laid itself bare, denuded of every vestige of guile.

"I—I think I believe you," came slowly from the lips of the searcher. "You are looking the truth: I can see it. Hetty, I—I don't understand myself. Is it so—so overwhelming, so tremendous. It is so incredible. Am I really believing you? Is it possible that I have been wrong in—"

"Let me tell you everything," cried the girl, suddenly throwing her arms about her.

"Not now! Wait! Give me time to think. Go away now. I want to be alone."

She arose and pushed the girl toward the door. Her eyes were fixed on her in a wondering, puzzled sort of way, and she was shaking her head as if trying to discredit the new emotion that had come to displace the one created ages ago.

Slowly Hetty Castleton retreated toward the door. With her hand on the knob, she paused.

"After what has happened, Sara, you must not expect me to stay with you any longer. I cannot. You may give me up to the law, but—"

Some one was tapping gently at the door.

"Shall I see who it is?" asked the girl, after a long period of silence.

"Yes."

It was Murray. "Mr. Leslie has returned, Miss Castleton, and asks if he may see you at once. He says it is very important."

"Tell him I will be down in a few minutes, Murray."

After the door closed, she waited until the footman's steps died away on the stairs.

"I shall say no to him, Sara, and I shall say to him that you will tell him why I cannot be his wife. Do you understand? Are you listening to me?"

Sara turned away without a word or look of response.

Hetty quietly opened the door and went out.

CHAPTER XIII.

The Second Encounter.

Booth trudged rapidly homeward after leaving Hetty at the lodge. He was throbbing all over with the love of her. The thrill of conquest was in his blood. She had raised a mysterious barrier; all the more zealous to the inevitable victory that would be his. He would delight in overcoming obstacles—the bigger the better—for his heart was valiant and the prize no smaller than those which the ancient knights went out to battle for in the lists of love.

It was enough for the present to know that she loved him.

What if she were Hetty Glynn? What if she had been an artist's model? The look he had had into the soul of her through those pure blue eyes was all-conquering. She was worthy of the noblest love.

After luncheon—served with some exasperation by Patrick an hour and a half later than usual—he smoked his pipe on the porch and stared reminiscently at the shifting clouds above the tree tops.

He did not see the Wrاندall motor at his garden gate until a lusty voice brought him down from the clouds into the range of earthly sounds. Then he dashed out to the gate, bareheaded and careless, forgetting that he had been sitting in the obscurity of trailing vines and purple blossoms while he thought of her.

Leslie was sitting on the wide seat between his mother and sister.

"Glad to see you back, old man," said Booth, reaching in to shake hands with him. "Day early, aren't you? Good afternoon, Mrs. Wrاندall. Won't you come in?"

He looked at Vivian as he gave the invitation.

"No, thanks," she replied. "Won't you come to dinner this evening?"

He hesitated. "I'm not quite sure whether I can, Vivian. I've got a half-way sort of—"

"Oh, do, old chap," cut in Leslie, more as a command than an entreaty. "Sorry I can't be there myself, but you'll fare quite as well without me. I'm dining at Sara's. Wants my private ear about one thing and another—see what I mean?"

"We shall expect you, Brandon," said Mrs. Wrاندall, fixing him with her languette.

"I'll come, thank you," said he.

He felt disgustingly transparent under that inquisitive gaze.

Wrاندall stepped out of the car. "I'll stop off for a chat with Brandy, mother."

"Shall I send the car back, dear?"

"Never mind. I'll walk down."

The two men turned in at the gate as the car sped away.

"Well," said Booth, "it's good to see you, Pat!"

He called through a basement window. "Come up and take the gentleman's order."

"No drink for me, Brandy. I've been in the temperance state of Maine for two weeks. One week more of it and I'd have been completely pined. I shall always remember Maine."

Booth sat down on the porch rail, hooked his toes in the supports and proceeded to fill his pipe. Then he struck a match and applied it. Leslie watched him with moody eyes.

"How do you like the portrait, old man?" he inquired between punctuating puffs.

"It's bully. Sargent never did anything finer. Kipling."

"I owe it all to you, Les."

"To me?"

"You induced her to sit to me."

"So I did," said Leslie slyly. "I was Mr. Fix-it sure enough." He allowed the short interval to elapse before taking the plunge. "I suppose, old chap, if I should happen to need your valuable services as best man in the near future, you'd not disappoint me?"

Booth eyed him quizzically. "I trust you're not throwing yourself away, Les," he said drily. "I mean to say, on some one—well, some one not quite up to the mark."

Leslie regarded him with some severity. "Of course not, old chap. What the devil put that into your head?"

"I thought that possibly you'd been making a chump of yourself up in the Maine woods."

"Piffle! Don't be an ass. What's the sense pretending you don't know who she is?"

"I suppose it's Hetty Castleton," said Booth, puffing away at his pipe. "Who else?"

"Think she'll have you, old man?" asked Booth, after a moment.

"I don't know," replied the other, a bit dashed. "You might wish me luck, though."

Booth knocked the burnt tobacco from the bowl of his pipe. A serious line appeared between his eyes. He was a fair-minded fellow, without gusto, without a single treacherous instinct.

"I can't wish you luck, Les," he said slowly. "You see I'm—I'm in love with her myself."

"The devil!" Leslie sat bolt upright and glared at him. "I might have known! And—and is she in love with you?"

"My dear fellow, you reveal considerable lack of tact in asking that question."

"What I want to know is this," exclaimed Wrاندall, very pale but very hot: "Is she going to marry you?"

Booth smiled. "I'll be perfectly frank with you. She says she won't."

Leslie gulped. "So you've asked her?"

"Obviously."

"And she said she wouldn't? She refused you? Turned you down?" His little mustache shot up at the ends and a joyous, triumphant laugh broke from his lips. "Oh, this is rich! Ha, ha! Turned you down, eh? Poor old Brandy! You're my best friend; and dammit I'm sorry. I mean to say," he went on in some embarrassment, "I'm sorry for you. Of course, you can hardly expect me to—"

"Certainly not," accepted Booth amiably. "I quite understand."

"Then, since she's refused you, you might wish me better luck."

"That would mean giving up hope."

"Hope?" exclaimed Leslie quickly. "You don't mean to say you'll annoy her with your—"

"No, I shall not annoy her," replied his friend, shaking his head.

"Well, I should hope not," said Leslie with a scowl. "Turned you down, eh? 'Pon my soul! He appeared to be relishing the idea of it."

"Sorry, old chap, but I suppose you understand just what that means."

Booth's lips hardened for an instant, then relaxed into a queer, almost plying smile.

"And you want me to be your best man?" he said reflectively.

Leslie arose. His chest seemed to swell a little; assuredly he was breathing much easier. He assumed an air of compassion.

"I shan't insist, old fellow, if you feel you'd rather not—or—See what I mean?" It then occurred to him to utter a word or two of kindly advice.

"I shouldn't go on moping if I were you, Brandy. 'Pon my soul, I shouldn't. Take it like a man. I know it hurts, but—Poo! What's the use aggravating the pain by butting against a stone wall?"

His companion looked out over the tree tops, his hands in his trousers pockets, and it must be confessed that his manner was not that of one who is oppressed by despair.

"I think I'm taking it like a man, Les," he said. "I only hope you'll take it as nicely if she says nay to you."

An uneasy look leaped into Leslie's face. He seemed noticeably less content about the chest. He wondered if Booth knew anything about his little venture. A question rose to his lips, but he thought quickly and held it back. Instead, he glanced at his watch.

"I must be off. See you tomorrow, I hope."

"So long," said Booth, stopping at the top of the steps while his visitor skipped down to the gate with a aliveness that suggested the formation of a sudden resolve.

Leslie did not waste time in parting. Instincts he strode off briskly in the direction of home, but not without a furtive glance out of the tail of his eye as he disappeared beyond the hedgerow at the end of Booth's garden. That gentleman was standing where he had left him, and was filling his pipe once more.

The day was warm, and Leslie was in a dripping perspiration when he reached home. He did not enter the house but made his way direct to the garage.

"Get out the car at once, Brown," was his order.

Three minutes later he was being driven over the lower road toward Southbrook, taking good care to avoid Booth's place by the matter of a mile or more. He was in a fever of hope and eagerness. It was very plain to him why she had refused Booth. The iron was hot. He didn't intend to lose any time in striking.

And now we know why he came again to Sara's in the middle of a blinding afternoon, instead of waiting until the more seductive shades of night had fallen, when the moon sat serene in the seat of the Mighty.

He didn't have to wait long for Hetty. Up to the instant of her appearance in the door, he had revealed in the thought that the way was now paved with roses. But with her entrance, he felt his confidence and courage slipping. Perhaps that may explain the abruptness with which he proceeded to go about the business in hand.

"I couldn't wait till tonight," he explained as she came slowly across the room toward him. She was half-way to him before he awoke to the fact that he was standing perfectly still. Then he started forward, somehow impelled to meet her at least half-way. "You'll forgive me, Hetty, if I have disturbed you."

"I was not lying down, Mr. Wrاندall," she said quietly. There was nothing ominous in the words, but he experienced a sudden sensation of cold. "Won't you sit down? Or would you rather go out to the terrace?"

"It's much more comfortable here, if you don't mind. I—I suppose you know what it is I want to say to you. You—"

"Yes," she interrupted, wearily; "and knowing as much, Mr. Wrاندall, it would not be fair of me to let you go on."

"Not fair?" he said, in honest amazement. "But, my dear, I—"

"Please, Mr. Wrاندall," she exclaimed, with a pleading little smile that would have touched the heart of anyone but Leslie. "Please don't go on. It is quite as impossible now as it was before. I have not changed."

"He could only say, mechanically: 'You haven't?'"

"No. I am sorry if you have thought that I might come to—"

"Think, for heaven's sake, think what you are doing!" he cried, feeling for the edge of the table with a support-seeking hand. "I—I had Sara's word that you were not—"

"Unfortunately Sara cannot speak for me in a matter of this kind. Thank you for the honor you would—"

"Honor be hanged!" he blurted out, losing his temper. "I love you! It's a purely selfish thing with me, and I'm blotted if I consider it an honor to be refused by any woman. I—"

"Mr. Wrاندall!" she cried, fixing him with her flashing, indignant eyes. "You are forgetting yourself."

She was standing very straight and slim and imperious before him.

He quailed. "I—I beg your pardon, I—"

"There is nothing more to be said," she went on leily. "Goodby."

"Would you mind telling me whether there is anyone else?" he asked, as he turned toward the door.

"Do you really feel that you have the right to ask that question, Mr. Wrاندall?"

He wet his lips with his tongue. "Then, there's some one!" he cried, rapping the table with his knuckles. He didn't realize till afterward how vigorously he rapped. "Some confounded English nobody, I suppose."

She smiled, not unkindly. "There is no English nobody, if that answers your question."

"Then, will you be kind enough to offer a reason for not giving me a fair chance in a clear field? I think it's due—"

"Can't you see how you are distressing me? Must I again go through that horrid scene in the garden? Can't you take a plain no for an answer?"

"Good Lord!" he gasped, and in those two words he revealed the complete overturning of a lifelong estimate of himself. It seemed to take more than his breath away.

"Goodby," she said with finality.

He stared at the door through which she disappeared, his hopes, his conceits, his self-regard trailing after her with shameless disloyalty to the standards he had set for them, and then, with a rather ghastly smile of self-commiseration on his lips, he slipped out of the house, jumped into the motor car, and gave a brief but explicit command to the chauffeur, who lost no time in assisting his master.

A brown thrush sped through the air, close by the timid canary. Like a flash it dropped to the twigs lower down, its wings palpitating in violent alarm.

"Dicky!" called Sara Wrاندall, and then cheeped between her teeth.

A moment later Dicky was fluttering about the eaves; his circles grew smaller, his winging less rhythmic, till at last with a nervous little flutter he perched on the top of the window shutter, so near that they might have reached to him with their hands. He sat there with his head cocked to one side.

"Dicky!" called Sara again. This time she held out her finger. For some time he regarded it with indifference, not to say disfavor. Then he took one more flight, but much shorter than the first, bringing up again at the shutter-top. A second later he hopped down and his little talons gripped Sara's finger with an earnestness that left no room for doubt.

She lowered her hand until it was even with the open door of the gilded cage. He shot inside with a whirr that suggested a scramble. With his wings folded, he sat on his little perch and cheeped. She closed and fastened the door, and then turned to Hetty.

"My symbol," she said softly. There were tears in Hetty's eyes.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Forget to Collect Their Money.

The British government every year reaps a huge profit from the people who forget their own government stock when dividend fall due. The fault rests entirely with the stockholders for they never forget to give their addresses, so that they can be notified that money awaits them in the government coffers. In this case, about $5,000,000 is passed on to the national debt commission, and in turn it receives the interest from this money.

"My position here is a false one, Sara. I prefer to go."

"This morning I should have held a sword over your head."

"It is very difficult for me to realize all that has happened."

"You are free to depart. You are free in every sense of the word. Your future rests with yourself, my dear."

"It hurts me more than I can tell to feel that you have been hating me all these months."

"It hurts me—now."

Hetty walked to the window and looked out.

"What are your plans?" Sara inquired, after an interval.

"I shall seek employment—and wait for you to net."

"If you mean?"

"I shall not run away, Sara. Nor do I intend to reveal myself to the authorities. I am not morally guilty of crime. A year ago I feared the consequences of my deed, but I have learned much since then. I was a stranger in a new world. In England we have been led to believe that you lynch women here as readily as you lynch men. I now know better than that. From you alone I learned my greatest lesson. You revealed to me the true meaning of human kindness. You shielded me who should not. Even now I believe that your first impulse was a tender one. I shall not forget it, Sara. You will live to regret the baser thought that came later on. I have loved you—yes, almost as a good god loves his master. It is not for me to tell the story of that night and all these months to the world. I would not be betraying myself, but you. You would be called upon to explain, not I. And you would be the one to suffer. When you met me on the road that night I was on my way back to the Inn to give myself into custody. Do you have made it impossible for me to do so now. My lips are sealed. It rests with you, Sara."

Sara joined her in the broad window. There was a strangely excited look in her face. A gilded birdcage hung suspended in the easement. Without a word, she threw open the window screen. The gay little canary for the gilded cage cocked his head and watched her with alert eyes. Then she reached up and gently removed the cage from its fastenings. Putting it down upon the window sill, she opened the tiny door. The bird hopped about his prison in a state of great excitement.

Hetty looked on, fascinated.

At last a yellow streak shot out through the open door and an instant later resolved itself into the bobbing, fluttering dicky-bird that had lived in a cage all its life without an hour of freedom. For a few seconds it circled over the tree tops and then alighted on one of the branches. One might well have imagined that he could hear its tiny heart beating with terror. Its wings were half-raised and fluttering, its head jerking from side to side in wild perturbation. Taking courage,

MRS. THOMSON TELLS WOMEN

How She Was Helped During Change of Life by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I am just 52 years of age and during Change of Life I suffered for six years terribly. I tried several doctors but none seemed to give me any relief. Every month the pains were intense in both sides, and made me so weak that I had to go to bed. At last a friend recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to me and I tried it at once and found much relief. After that I had no pains at all and could do my housework and shopping the same as always. For years I have praised Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for what it has done for me, and shall always recommend it as a woman's friend. You are at liberty to use my letter in any way."—Mrs. Thomson, 639 W. Russell St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Change of Life is one of the most critical periods of a woman's existence. Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to carry women so successfully through this trying period as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

A Modern Disease.
Old Jake woke up and rubbed his eyes as he gazed on the unfamiliar room. Then he remembered, and hopped out of bed. Fifteen years had he served out of the meager wages given him by a grateful farmer, in order to visit London.

"Uncle," came his young nephew's voice at the doorway, "mother says if you come and set those madder seeds and see what you can do with the old black 'em what's got a bad leg?"

Uncle and nephew soon entered the little back garden, when the old boy stopped short with amazement, and adjusted his glasses to gaze at the small figure on the grass plot, who was performing gymnastic feats.

"Does thy sister have it, lad?" he asked, with concern.

"No, uncle," replied the nipper with grin, "thom's gymnastic feats."

Mecca of Buddhist World

LONG before the clean, green shores of Rangoon become visible to the navigator on the Irrawaddy, there appears above the highest point of the horizon a shaft of gold set in a coronet of gems that throws a rainbow shimmer across the splendid blue of the Asiatic sky. As you draw near the fine old city the jeweled diadem slowly rises and takes definite outline, and presently you behold the great golden dome of the Sway Dragon pagoda, which is the "Glory of Burma" and the Mecca of the Buddhist world.

From every viewpoint the radiant temple dominates the city, imposing and glorious—one of the finest sights of the world in its barbaric splendor of color and form. It is the oldest shrine in Burma, the one most frequently visited of all places of worship east of India, and it contains actual relics of Gautama Buddha which have for centuries attracted pilgrims from every part of Asia, even from the remote corners of almost inaccessible Tibet. At first you, being an Occidental traveler, accustomed to the towering architectural triumphs of the West, wonder idly at the compelling attractiveness of the ancient edifice that incites so much speculative reflection; then you gradually become aware of a distinctively personal interest in the golden monitor that greets you so invitingly wherever you turn in your wanderings about the beautiful old town. Finally it takes possession of your fancy, more than any other thing that you have traveled so very far to see; more than the old forts and ancient shrines, the lovely gardens and the brilliant, light-humored native life—more than anything in all picturesque Burma.

Stone Dragons Guard Approach.
The principal approach to the temple city—for it is literally a city of shrines clustered about the central pagoda—is guarded by two enormous blue stone dragons behind which rise statues in long series, covered with elaborately carved teakwood roofs supported at regular intervals by great stone pillars. The stone steps have been worn very uneven by the countless feet that have gone up and down for more than seven hundred worshipful years. Seats are ranged along the spacious landings for the comfort of the old and decrepit worshippers who find the long climb difficult, and above these seats are numerous very old but finely preserved carvings and frescoes of fanciful design and beautiful workmanship.

As you toil upward you meet and pass men and women of all races, some of whom are so remote from you in speech and customs and habits of thought that it would be difficult, if not impossible, to find the key to a common understanding between you. Only one word can unlock the deep antipodean silence and place you for an instant on a plane of comprehension with these strange primitive beings whose existence holds nothing that can bridge the vast gulf that separates civilization and medievalism, and that word, "Buddha," which brings light to every Buddhist face. You hesitate to speak experimentally because it has mysteriously become sacred to you in that vast assembly of worshippers to whom it means all they know of holiness and mercy and hope. So you pass on in awed silence, watching the human stream with an interest intensified by the strangeness of the place and by the evidences of the common spiritual need that drew the heterogeneous throng from the far ends of the universe.

That curious horde is well worth watching. There are old, old men tottering feebly from step to step, equally old women of many races; handsome young girls with blithe morning faces; little radiant children in hummingbird attire; stolid, harsh-featured Mongolians from Western China, Tibetans in coarse, ungainly and far from clean attire; squat and homely men and women from further Cambodia and Siam; pale, refined looking Hindus in snowy garments and enormous spotted turbans—all bent upon a single purpose.

Sell Flowers to Gild Great Dome.
At close intervals along the well-nigh interminable steps are fragrant little booths containing all the opulent flowers of the country, incense sticks and tiny packets of gold leaf, presided over by bright looking Burmese girls who offer their wares with charming modesty. You need not buy if you feel disinclined, but the chances are that you will gladly invest a few cents in a thin packet of gold leaf which will be used, later on, to overlay some tiny weather-flaw in the great golden dome of the pagoda which is never permitted to suffer impairment for lack of attention (for your little purchase is intended for a votive offering). It takes a great deal of gold to keep the dome in perfect repair, for it is 1350 feet in circumference and 370 feet high, and it is covered from base to summit with pure gold leaf. The jeweled diadem that crowns this marvelous temple is valued at $250,000, and was a gift of the common people of Burma; and the gold leaf reserve fund in the temple treasury was contributed by pilgrim worshippers, many of whom are so wretchedly poor all their lives that they have never known the luxury of a full meal, yet their poverty pinched hands are rarely empty within the temple precincts.

At length you find yourself at the base of the central pagoda, surrounded by a multiplicity of small shrines exquisite in detail, but fantastic in conception, yet with a sort of appealing grotesqueness that causes your heart to beat faster, as if it brought you to the verge of an understanding of the strange spiritual fervor which it represents. In a vast court open to the brilliant Asiatic sunshine these confusingly numerous shrines display a great variety of Buddhas, some reclining luxuriously among jeweled lotus flowers, some bowed in profound meditation, but all of them serene and peaceful in feature in spite of the profusion of paint and gilding. Among the offerings piled about the shrines are many old and worthless objects such as paper umbrellas, fans, toys, faded flowers and brass trinkets, but there are also some pretty trifles of personal adornment. At the feet of a smiling seated Buddha is a coil of blue black hair covered with the dust of a long pilgrimage, perhaps, bestowed by a very poor young girl who had nothing else to give.

Within the larger shrines many devotees kneel in prayer at all hours of the day, each with a flower clasped against his bowed forehead. The very young girls pray together in a beautiful pavilion hung with banners and silk draperies and many bright things symbolical of buoyant girlhood. There is even a gay little American flag, hung there by some facetious tourist, probably, and accepted in a holler spirit by the simple-minded votaries who never turn anyone away, of whatever creed or race.

Naval Officers Well Paid.
An English writer compares the pay of American naval officers with that of similar officers abroad. An American admiral draws, he says, $15,000 a year, while about $9,000 is allotted to the same rank in Great Britain, and $4,500 in Germany; and all other grades of officers are paid equally well in proportion.

"The French are receiving in their homes refugees from Belgium and northern France. The Germans are doing the same as regards the refugees from oriental Prussia."

The speaker was a returned tourist. He went on:

"Many French and German households have neither room enough nor means enough to take in a whole family. They must confine themselves to one child. Well, they invariably bid then for a little girl. They never want a boy."

"I have seen in my travels several hundred of these offers to take in children—and every blessed offer was for girls. What is the cause of this? The cause must evidently be that girls are better behaved, more amiable and nicer all around than boys."

"The war, besides teaching me geography, has taught me that female children stand miles higher in popular esteem than male children. What's the trouble with us males? We'd better look to ourselves."

Dead Soldier's Gift.

Among the contributions to Queen Mary of England's Work for Women fund received recently was an engagement ring which arrived by mail, accompanied by the following letter: "The boy who gave me this before he went away will never come back. He made me promise before he joined his regiment to give it away if anything happened to him. It's a hard wrench to part with it, but I promised him to do so. I send it to you as his gift to the Queen's fund."

Boils Biliousness Malaria Constipation

Perhaps this case may be similar to yours

J. Wesley Tilly of (Box 673), Selma, Cal., writes: "Gentlemen: It gives me much pleasure to be able to send you a testimonial, if by so doing some sufferer your medicine will do as much for him as they have for me. At the age of fourteen I was troubled a great deal with malaria and biliousness, accompanied with the worst sort of large boils. I was persuaded by my parents, who have always been strong believers in Dr. Pierce's remedies, to try the Golden Medical Discovery. I took one bottle and the boils all disappeared, but I did not stop at one bottle, I took three and the malaria all left me and I have had no more boils to this day, thanks to the Golden Medical Discovery for my relief."

"Following an operation for appendicitis two years ago I was troubled very much with constipation and I have been using Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets and they have rid me of the troublesome gas and have aided me in conquering the whole trouble. I thank you for the 'Boiler' and for the advice I have obtained from The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser." Send only 21 cents for this 100 page book.
